

Fig. 8

remains is to identify those cases when it is not possible. This is the final special case in our strategy of cancelling \wedge -pairs. It leads to the situation depicted in figure 7 and this is solved in figure 8. The two figures will be explained later. The first problem is to give some characterization of those special d -pairs that cannot be reduced to c -pairs by insertion. We need some preparations for this description.